Great and Useful Invention. No more Mortality for want of Water. Sure wealth to Estanceros.

By the Robert Apparatus. Being notorious the immense injury occasioned by the scarcity of water during the long (seas) that afflict the camps of Buenos Ayres...

Another advantage is the facility of putting it together and taking it to pieces, so as to be able to transport it to any place where it may be necessary to use it, either for watering purposes or others.

GREAT MODIFICATION. I have made an improvement in my Apparatus, applying a new system which reduces the necessary force to one third, giving it at the same time more rapidity.

For Sale. The American-built Yacht "SILVER". 71 tons register.

PRESIDENT MITRE'S SPEECH

It is an admitted fact that the inauguration was one of the greatest and most important functions ever witnessed in Buenos Ayres; it is equally certain that the President's speech was a brilliant and graceful discourse, worthy of one who is to be met on an equal footing with the great nations of the world.

When we remember how much was made of the President's speech at the previous celebration of San Fernando, we must conclude that the present silence is only attributable to the eloquent position of Gen. Mitre respecting Queen Victoria and the English nation, which were unpalatable to our republican journalists.

The British played its usual, a double game promising to give the President's speech on Thursday, then saying the manuscript had been sent elsewhere; but what necessity has a newspaper in any Christian country to look for the original copy, and why did not Messrs. Vazquez imitate the Editor of the Standard, and take down notes?

Finally, the said speech of Gen. Mitre is reported almost verbatim in our paper of Tuesday, and the labor of translating would have been but trifling.

IMPORTANT DISPATCH. Argentine Consulate, Liverpool, Jan 22, 1864. To the Minister of Foreign Affairs.

Having written to your Excellency on the 8th inst. I now transmit a report of commercial matters for the past year, which may be of interest to Buenos Ayres and the Republic.

Political crisis. Salted ox hides are firm, the imports for 1864 being 465, 830, or 80,570 over preceding year's prices are 1 penny lower than 1863 but indicate a rise, owing to the drought in Buenos Ayres and war in Santa Oriental.

It is worthy the attention of Government that the farmers change the place of branding from the hours to the other part of the body, for this would improve the salted hides a penny or two per piece.

We are happy to see that Dr. Lauro, of Concepcion Uruguay, has been named professor of the letters in the University of Buenos Ayres.

Our readers who have been so accustomed to read the most astounding news from Fray Bentos, and even at times distressing intelligence at Rosario, will probably be prepared to hear the alarming state of Barracas.

A new and just enactment has come into force in London, respecting trade marks, imposing a punishment of two years' penal servitude and fine on all who forge such marks, and a fine of £5 on persons selling articles with the marks of another.

EDITOR'S TABLE. The French Consulate yesterday was nearly done up. All the logs in the office were called into requisition, and still there was a pile of Standards to be sent off.

We regret sincerely to chronicle a most melancholy event, which occurred in the vicinity of the Post-office on Friday night. A young lady (Miss A. Rivera) committed suicide, by hanging herself.

Young, beautiful, and fascinating, in the very morning of life, she, in a fit of despondency, put an end to her existence.

The news from San Juan, which will be found in another column, is not the most flattering. There seems to have been a regular mob row at the mines, resulting in the death of three men and the destruction of the machinery.

The Saitongo left without being stopped, although it was confidently predicted that Mr. Marmol would detain her. We wish the poetic and talented Minister a kind farewell, and hope that he will make himself more at home in Rio Janeiro than he was in Montevideo.

We have received a letter from Rojas, flatly contradicting the reported invasion of Bullians, which we published under false information. No Indians, no natives or foreigners in arms, no disturbance; thank God.

We are informed that the sum handed over to the American Minister for the White family was $59,000 dollars. The native papers inaccurately gave it as $60,000 dollars, which induced our error.

The drought in the Banda Oriental is becoming most alarming, not a horse or cow is to be seen for leagues and leagues, and it is said that the Government has passed over all its tin caballos to Gen. Rios, where the game is good.

Our readers who have been so accustomed to read the most astounding news from Fray Bentos, and even at times distressing intelligence at Rosario, will probably be prepared to hear the alarming state of Barracas.

Yesterday the whole neighbourhood, north and south, was in the most frightful condition—people running to and fro, sailors without ships, boats without oars. Never since the well-known waters of the Parana broke its banks and dashed up through the Boca mud, creating in the instant the enchanting stream of the Rio Riachuelo—never since the day when the first Englishman planted his jerga beef head-quarters upon the cliffs of Barracas, and by the magic wand of what President Mitre so beautifully apostrophised, "British capital, changed, as it were, by the very atmosphere of the locality—never was there such a row before known or heard of as that which, we regret to say, occurred on last Thursday and Friday.

The distraction of the Barracaian extended to the Boca, where the swarthy mariners, heedless of their vessels and cargoes, forgetting even those tender domestic ties which some person has said distinguished man from the brute—they rushed along the muddy banks of the Boca.

The Merino must gain a great reputation in future by being exported; the wool of the wandering flocks had obtained the greater celebrity—that is to say, those flocks which remained the whole year in the open air, which were fed during summer in the highest districts of Spain, in the mountains of old Castille and of Aragon, but which in Autumn were led to the low countries, such as the plains of La Mancha, of Andalusia, and particularly of Betermanaria.

At this time the Merino is in force, and flees at liberty to feed upon the lands near the high roads. These wandering flocks are the progenitors of our electoral rams.

Meanwhile, the old Pintos might be turned to some advantage, by converting her into a sort of floating barraca; or better still, knock her into a temporary sailor's home.

To ministers still worse in Barracas, we regret to say that a most shocking murder was committed on Friday night; a wife murdered her husband. The details of this affair we have not yet received, but regret to say, that there is no doubt as to the commission of the crime.

Death of Don Cayetano Berro. The family of Ex-President Berro has, during the last year, suffered some severe losses. It had first to lament the death of a beloved child; afterwards the loss of that estimable youth, Don Alberto Jackson. And again death has visited their circle, and snatched away Don Cayetano Berro, the eldest brother of Señor Don Bernardo P. Berro.

This last sad event was as much owing to the attitude taken by Flores and his followers against his brother as to advances made by the latter to the suburbs, the rebels occupied on the shores of the Berro family, where Don Cayetano was then living.

In order to quench their thirst for blood, they sought out Don Cayetano, who, without their knowing it, was before them, and who, in fleeing, saw the eagerness with which they sought him. An angry crowd of men, and a loaded gun, were thrust into his hands, and he refused to tell, and was tied to a tree and gagged most brutally.

Our readers who have been so accustomed to read the most astounding news from Fray Bentos, and even at times distressing intelligence at Rosario, will probably be prepared to hear the alarming state of Barracas.

Report of the Argentine Consul in Saxony on the Present State of the Sheep and Wool Trade in Saxony and the Spanish Crown's Breed.

For a long time Spain had been celebrated for its breed of sheep, and for the great care bestowed upon the splendid race introduced from the Barbary States; even before England or Germany had turned their attention to this important subject.

The Merino must gain a great reputation in future by being exported; the wool of the wandering flocks had obtained the greater celebrity—that is to say, those flocks which remained the whole year in the open air, which were fed during summer in the highest districts of Spain, in the mountains of old Castille and of Aragon, but which in Autumn were led to the low countries, such as the plains of La Mancha, of Andalusia, and particularly of Betermanaria.

At this time the Merino is in force, and flees at liberty to feed upon the lands near the high roads. These wandering flocks are the progenitors of our electoral rams.

Meanwhile, the old Pintos might be turned to some advantage, by converting her into a sort of floating barraca; or better still, knock her into a temporary sailor's home.

In 1771, when the importance of the subject was known, the Saxony Government took advantage to increase the number of the first flock, purchasing cattle sheep for the purpose of crossing, although a great feature in German farming, has had no great influence on the breeding rules of Germany, as it has been found on trial, that they do not cross well with the native animals.

Three model flocks in Saxony have acquired a world-wide reputation, as they are a fountain of prosperity, not only for that country, but also for the other German States, and the flocks of Northern and Western Germany have sprung from Saxony.

In 1775, 1786, and 1802, Austria introduced the Saxony merinos into the imperial dominions of Galicia in Hungary, and even for England and Austria, and in 1829, they were re-introduced into Spain to establish the pure breed of merinos.

In 1775, 1786, and 1802, Austria introduced the Saxony merinos into the imperial dominions of Galicia in Hungary, and even for England and Austria, and in 1829, they were re-introduced into Spain to establish the pure breed of merinos.

It is owing to the crossing of Saxony and Austrian breeds that we are enabled to speak of the present state of the sheep and wool trade in Saxony and the Spanish Crown's Breed.

For a long time Spain had been celebrated for its breed of sheep, and for the great care bestowed upon the splendid race introduced from the Barbary States; even before England or Germany had turned their attention to this important subject.

The Merino must gain a great reputation in future by being exported; the wool of the wandering flocks had obtained the greater celebrity—that is to say, those flocks which remained the whole year in the open air, which were fed during summer in the highest districts of Spain, in the mountains of old Castille and of Aragon, but which in Autumn were led to the low countries, such as the plains of La Mancha, of Andalusia, and particularly of Betermanaria.

At this time the Merino is in force, and flees at liberty to feed upon the lands near the high roads. These wandering flocks are the progenitors of our electoral rams.

Meanwhile, the old Pintos might be turned to some advantage, by converting her into a sort of floating barraca; or better still, knock her into a temporary sailor's home.

Now the question is being discussed which country possesses the breed best adapted for giving remunerative results. The introduction of the English cellid sheep, for the purpose of crossing, although a great feature in German farming, has had no great influence on the breeding rules of Germany, as it has been found on trial, that they do not cross well with the native animals.

From 1827 to 1828, the breeders were obliged to import from Silesia rams and ewes, in order to derive any benefit from their flocks, as they found their sheep in a bad condition, owing to their strenuous efforts to produce fine wool. The same thing happened with the Negretti breed, which they had sacrificed the quality to the quantity.

It is well known, that when Silesian sheep reached their highest point, 100 rams (245 sheep down) were required for a ram. In consequence of the continued bettering of the wool, the weight diminished, but the price advanced; it had succeeded in manufacturing the same class of goods with inferior wools. Taking into consideration the high rents of land, scarcity of labour, increased rate of interest, and the difficulty of finding capital to invest in the sheep, it will easily be seen, that to meet these heavy expenses breeders must follow a course different to that now in use.

Sheepbreeding should be put on the same footing as other branches of rural economy; that is to say, that in proportion to the increased capital sunk, and the cost of rearing, but, sheep should fetch high prices, they are prevented from doing so until they reach three years of age.

The plan adopted to obtain a good breed of sheep, is to select the animals to be culled until they are two years old, and prevent them from mixing with the ewes for more than 4 or 5 weeks, so that the lambs are dropped at the same time, and the rams have the run of not more than 40 or 50 ewes.

For the first summer it is as well to feed the lambs in folds, with dry and green herbage, and better still, mixed with clover and lucerne. After that, chopped up, if good pastures are not to be had in the neighbourhood. Older lambs can also be fed in folds during the summer with green food, but the expense is so great, that, except on urgent occasions, it would not pay. Particular care should be taken to preserve the lambs from damp, which is the principal cause of rot, and has carried off so many flocks.

Shearing is conducted in two ways in Germany. One is to wash the sheep before the shearing; the other is to wash the wool afterwards. By the plan, which is the one more universally adopted in Europe, the sheep suffer the least, as the frequent washing of the sheep causes the great damage, the better price is paid for that washed on the body of the animal, as the other does not so easily dry or adapt to the mixing with other wools. Saxony only sheared once a year in Germany, viz., from the beginning of May till the middle of June, when the water is lukewarm. The first shearing cannot be carried out with sheep which are shorn twice a year, viz., in May and September.

Sheep which they are trying to keep in Germany a plan to keep the sheep as near as possible to the original breed. The best breed has reached a point of excellence that leaves nothing to be desired with regard to quality; it is the great object to be now attained, is an increase in quantity, without deteriorating the quality.

Some recent German sheepfarmers, even in the short time that has been devoted to this branch of stockraising, have rams which pass as proverbs, and for which fabulous prices are paid.

Now the question is being discussed which country possesses the breed best adapted for giving remunerative results. The introduction of the English cellid sheep, for the purpose of crossing, although a great feature in German farming, has had no great influence on the breeding rules of Germany, as it has been found on trial, that they do not cross well with the native animals.

BANK MAUD & CO.

No. 103 calle de Cangallo. —
BUENOS AYRES.

The undersigned advances of Accounts Current are now so generally left, and appropriated in the most judicious manner, that it is necessary to provide a safe and profitable depository for their savings. The Bank of Maud & Co. in Montevideo has already provided for the working class in that city, a safe and profitable depository for their savings. The sums deposited in that most important institution are daily increasing and already reach a very large amount. These advantages have not hitherto been enjoyed in this city by an immense number of Clerks, artisans, working-men & servants of all classes & conditions, who are equally interested in putting their savings out at interest, thus providing themselves with a reserve fund in case of need, and of old age, the end of spending them in the innocent gambling, in lotteries and other frivolities. The Bank of Maud & Co. of this city following the example of their Buenos Ayres September 19th 1863.
