The Cotton Crop of Paraguay

It will, no doubt, interest our mercantile readers, to learn the real state of the cotton crop in Paraguay. So much has been said respecting the amount of the crop...

Conceiving, therefore, that this matter was of infinitely more importance to our subscribers than the unmeaning details of Cruzo struggles...

As a matter of course, our brother editor had hardly set foot in the capital of Paraguay, before it was circulated freely through the city...

As an answer to our question as to the action of Government, the President most distinctly stated...

By one of the strangest of anomalies, the Paraguayan shop-keeper can afford to buy cotton at two silver pesos...

Which the export of Paraguay is limited to being imported by Government in order to be sold only at a certain fixed price...

At present the shop-keepers pay three Paraguayan dollars (ten shillings) per arroba, for seed cotton in the country...

The Government has at present about 200 bales ginned cotton, which will probably arrive per next steamer...

Along the River Paraguay all the cotton plantations have yielded splendid crops, whilst those in the interior have been partially missed...

There may be a few still in Buenos Ayres who question the importance of the cotton trade of Paraguay...

As we are now on the Western frontier, these portions a few years ago were comparatively valueless...

Neither of the Ministers, however, were in a position to say, with any degree of certainty, what the crop would amount to...

Nevertheless the collectors raised the Contribution 108 per cent on the previous year. It would be manifestly incorrect to take the returns for these three periods as true of the present time...
