GARIBALDI'S VISIT TO ENGLAND.

The following account of Garibaldi's arrival at Southampton is from the special correspondent of the Standard, dated Sunday.

When the vessel reached Southampton, the General appeared on the deck and ascended the ladder to the shore.

His admittance which all Englishmen, from the streets to the streets, felt for his noble character.

On the delivery of the address, at first unopened, but at last read with enthusiasm, Garibaldi was greeted with the applause of the vast crowd.

Garibaldi at Bedford. Since after the outbreak of the Italian Revolution, Garibaldi, accompanied by his wife, had been in England.

About half past nine, the people began to congregate to witness the General's departure from the Duke of Westminster's mansion for Bedford, and at ten o'clock the General started on his journey.
