The Standard. All faith and all truth nobis autem. Wednesday, May 11, 1864.

The National Article. We call the attention of all thinking men to an article which appeared in Monday evening's 'National,' entitled 'Que se ha?' If there is any Government in this place—if there is any Executive in the country—the man who penned that article should be punished. In the worst days of the French revolution never was there printed a more sanguinary appeal to arms than the article in question. Verily it would seem as if the politicians in this country were all going stark mad. Last week we had a vituperative attack against the most exemplary Minister in the country, and now we have an appeal to the people to erect barricades in the streets, and shoot down all the Cocidos in town. It is high time that we should ask—Is there, or is there not, any law in the country? Is the President of this Republic a myth?

The article in question would even in England be regarded as scurrilous, for in every civilized country in the world an appeal to the people to fight, shoot out, and murder in the streets, is punishable.

We could give allowance for the author of the 'National,' who is a young man, carried away by his feelings—we could pardon his sitting down under some sudden excitement and writing whatever comes into his head—but we cannot excuse the proprietor of that journal, who is a grey-headed man, for allowing such revolutionary appeals to be published in his paper. We cannot excuse Governor Saavedra for permitting a paper which was an organ of his Government, and to support which his Excellency's Government subscribes for some 200 papers daily, to teach such revolutionary revolutionary sentiments. If Don Mariano Saavedra allows this article to pass unavowed, he himself should be accused before the Supreme Federal Court for aiding and abetting revolution.

The man who ponders over this out-thrust article, and reflects to what an awful crisis we are fast drifting, realize, indeed, the critical position of the country at this moment. Every one looks up to President Mitre, but he does nothing.

We now come forward, as the organ of the richest and most influential body in the country—as the impartial friend of all peacefully disposed natives—as the stern and uncompromising enemy of revolution—we call upon the President of this Republic to remember his oath of office. If it is desirable that we should have another revolution—if it is the wish of the infuriated people of this country that the streets should be dyed with the citizens' blood—then Governor Saavedra and President Mitre can go no safer way to effect it than to allow the editors of the 'National' to write a few more such articles as 'Que se ha?'

Paraguay and La Plata. The 'Precursor,' of Antwerp, 10th of March, has a very interesting article on these Republics, and as the opinion of a leading paper in that progressive country, Belgium, deserves much weight, we translate the same.

The last English mail brings us cheering news of Paraguay, a country heretofore regarded as one of the most backward in Christendom, but now rapidly acquiring importance. While the neighboring states of La Plata are exhausting themselves in ruined and endless dissensions, and in a credit abroad, we see the prosperity of Paraguay increasing year by year. This striking difference between peoples of the same race which, fifty years ago, constituted but one nation, is the more strange at first sight, since Paraguay is at a great disadvantage in comparison with the other Republics as to geographical position, being some hundreds of leagues from the ocean. The order, progress, and prosperity of Paraguay, and the wretched condition of the adjacent Republics, cannot be ascribed to diversity of race or superior natural advantages. The difference is caused solely by the political organization of the old Spanish Colonies and their independence.

After shaking off the yoke of Spain, the inhabitants of La Plata could not hope to accept, without danger, the most advanced principles of self-government, which even in the most civilized nations of Europe were the fruit of years and centuries. Nevertheless, the heroic South American Republics adopted that form of Government in its fullest amplitude, while Paraguay, after its liberation from Spain, and release from the tyranny of Francia, proclaimed an administration more consonant with the state of the country, so as to prepare it for the gradual exercise of popular rights, by first instructing the masses, and impressing on them that true liberty can nowhere exist without order and respect for the laws.

The Republics of La Plata, like the rest, without undergoing any transition, without calculating on an article from one of the most influential European papers, the 'Precursor' of Antwerp, respecting Paraguay and the River Plate, which we translate and publish. It contains many truthful remarks concerning this Republic, which we could desire to see in this country would study. Strange indeed that in so distant a country as Belgium people should take so correct a view of our state.

The great man has been turned to us, and we gather from him some statistics. The monthly collections amount to about one million paper dollars. The Foreign Club use more gas, than any other house in town.

The 'Reforma Pacifica' states that Sr. Riestra is no Crudo, and that on the contrary his great sympathy for the National Government is so notorious that he is regarded by the Crudos as a thorough Cocido.

The musical society of the Scotch Church will hold a meeting on Friday, 13th inst. The new British Literary Club of Buenos Ayres will meet to arrange preliminaries to-morrow evening at seven o'clock in the evening at the Scotch Church.

Mrs. Santa Maria has favoured us with an interesting letter, which throws much light on the recent railway collision at London. It is published in 'Veritas' will again take the field. The public works gains by such discussions, as the French say, 'du choc des idées sort la lumière.' We received files of the New York papers, yesterday, per Lord Baltimore, but the latest dates is February, 18th, and we have had news 15 days later by French mail.

The Obul Liberator declares its intention to elect Messrs. Julian Martinez, D. B. Peña, and Emilio Castro, as senators for Buenos Ayres; the editor three seats have as yet no candidates. The Cocidos have published no list. To-morrow night we shall have an address from the Colon leader; the performance will commence with the National Hymn, in honor of the Installation of the 3rd Post-Pavonian Congress in La Plata. The opera will be 'Un halla on Meschis.'

The May festivals commence next Monday week, and promise to be unusually brilliant. On the 23rd the inauguration of the Western Railway section to Villa Luxan on the 24th, 25th, and 26th balloons ascends by the Argentinean Wills from Plaza Victoria.

The theatrical and University fairs will be illuminated a gloria each evening, by gas-jets. The ghost exhibit at Cañon will be given in the rest of La Plata.

The French packet will leave to-morrow, and our Packet Edition appears some morning. There is no news from the Kepler from Liverpool, bringing dates to the 5th ult. but the Mercury will probably announce it.

The Directors of the Cordoba Railway publish an advertisement in the 'National,' announcing, among others, D. Leon Catamarca, the runaway bankrupt, to collect calls on the shares. Surely this is an oversight.

The papers from Montevideo contain little of importance. Some rapturized shouts of Brazilians had committed shooting atrocities in the department of Cerve de Largo. The Government gave up to the Brazilian Minister all prisoners of that nationality, who were accordingly sent on board the Araguay, Brazilian gun boat at Salto.

M. Arango, chieftain of the order of St. ... gave a splendid banquet at the Hotel de la Paix, on Monday evening the 2nd inst. and other distinguished guests, at present in this city.

Legislature, are looked on with distrust and even alarm. It is thought the Justices of Peace will do as last time, i. e., walk off with the legislators, have no elections and then give an imaginary majority for the Crudos. We do not know if any measures will be taken to maintain order.

The picnic of the new steamer 'Bra' will come off at the Tigre, on her return from Gualeguaychú. The day is not yet fixed, but Sunday would be most convenient for respectable foreigners who wish to escape the elections.

Captain Lucio Mansilla has written a very laudable reply to the Bilbao school of infidels, ridiculing the profane and egotistical of those pseudo-Rationalist philosophers.

We call particular attention to an article from one of the most influential European papers, the 'Precursor' of Antwerp, respecting Paraguay and the River Plate, which we translate and publish. It contains many truthful remarks concerning this Republic, which we could desire to see in this country would study. Strange indeed that in so distant a country as Belgium people should take so correct a view of our state.

The French packet will leave to-morrow, and our Packet Edition appears some morning. There is no news from the Kepler from Liverpool, bringing dates to the 5th ult. but the Mercury will probably announce it.

The Directors of the Cordoba Railway publish an advertisement in the 'National,' announcing, among others, D. Leon Catamarca, the runaway bankrupt, to collect calls on the shares. Surely this is an oversight.

The papers from Montevideo contain little of importance. Some rapturized shouts of Brazilians had committed shooting atrocities in the department of Cerve de Largo. The Government gave up to the Brazilian Minister all prisoners of that nationality, who were accordingly sent on board the Araguay, Brazilian gun boat at Salto.

M. Arango, chieftain of the order of St. ... gave a splendid banquet at the Hotel de la Paix, on Monday evening the 2nd inst. and other distinguished guests, at present in this city.

The incident having nothing to do with the London Stock Exchange, and the cool manner in which the Argentine Central Prospectus has been received, I had no reason to allude to it in my previous letter, which only refers to the railway articles of three feet.

'Veritas' follows, saying that Mr. Robertson and myself are doubtless quite satisfied that the Rosario and Cordoba railway can be made at the cost of £4,500 per mile, although the cost of Glasgow could be made under £20,000. Here, I must observe, that the two items he refers to of £20,000 per mile, and £21,500 per mile preliminary survey, expenses, &c. (no such charge is granted by the law of concession), the figure would be further reduced to £20,000 per mile. The difference then is no more £35,000, as 'Veritas' notes, but £10,000 per mile, in the comparative view he takes of both lines. And even this difference would be still further reduced, when we take into consideration the cost of length of both lines, the cost of Respecting the burglars in Mr. Hargreave's store, we are sorry to learn the whole three were Englishmen. They were provided with picklocks, skeleton keys, and all the apparatus of house-breaking. We did an injustice to the sereno, who was the first to give the alarm, and it seems that the others only just effected an entrance when pounced upon.

The Argentine Central Railway. Buenos Aires, May 10, 1864. To the Editors of the Standard.

An anonymous correspondent who assumes the name of 'Veritas' writes you a letter in your number of the 7th inst. full of violent feelings against Mr. David Robertson, myself, and the Great Southern Railway Co. His alarm arises on account of a letter I addressed days ago to the 'Nacion Argentina' about the Argentine Central Railway, vindicating the character and proceedings of Mr. Robertson in London, which you thought proper to publish in your issue of the 12th inst. An anonymous correspondent who assumes the name of 'Veritas' writes you a letter in your number of the 7th inst. full of violent feelings against Mr. David Robertson, myself, and the Great Southern Railway Co.

His alarm arises on account of a letter I addressed days ago to the 'Nacion Argentina' about the Argentine Central Railway, vindicating the character and proceedings of Mr. Robertson in London, which you thought proper to publish in your issue of the 12th inst. An anonymous correspondent who assumes the name of 'Veritas' writes you a letter in your number of the 7th inst. full of violent feelings against Mr. David Robertson, myself, and the Great Southern Railway Co.

As he based all his letter on that false assumption, the least discretion on his part, in giving to the first blow first on your goodseeds and astly his curiosity. He would have then spared himself the trouble of writing incoherent things, by being silent on such a matter; he would have acted more judiciously; the same as others, less imprudent and better advised than his assertions, giving to the first blow first on your goodseeds and astly his curiosity.

Nevertheless he compels me much to my regret, to address these few lines, however disagreeable it is to discuss with anonymous writers. The consequences will be his own work, and clearly his blunder and putting again in evidence the errors of his friends, of which the less said the better.

The so-called 'Veritas' represents the Great Southern Railway and its directors as opposing the Argentine Central scheme. Why and wherefore, it is difficult to understand. Kindred and cognate topics like those, having an inter-ference or competition, cannot but be friendly together. Both contribute to progress and civilization, and must therefore sympathize, striving together as they do, to secure peace, order, and prosperity for these countries.

'Veritas' conceives it differently and finds fault with the latter, as if 'The disappointment on the part of the Great Southern' for not having the Escondada concession. That supposition is unwarranted. 'Veritas' is evidently ignorant of the fact, that this Escondada project, with all its obligations, had already been refused by the Directors of the Great Southern, when offered some time ago by Mr. Wheeler. Far from being eager about that onerous line, which concession will turn out probably a dead letter, the Great Southern would be glad to get rid of it, like every sensible man acquainted with the topography of this province, that if Escondada is ever to be connected by rail with Buenos Ayres, it will, more probably be, through the Great Southern as a branch channel, according to law, by the Provincial Government.

The long tract of private lands between both extensions of the railway, tracing the topography of this province, that if Escondada is ever to be connected by rail with Buenos Ayres, it will, more probably be, through the Great Southern as a branch channel, according to law, by the Provincial Government.

Let then 'Veritas' discern from his mind the illusions about the Escondada line. No more the art of getting what is not worth having, may be likely to be, for many years to come.

The mistake 'Veritas' has committed is, in doubting the having applied to the Escondada, what is the Great Southern in London about the Boca, and this not to be coded, but to be sold. Terms not having been agreed upon, the matter has been left at rest, each one keeping within its rights. The Great Southern Company at liberty to go to the Boca and elsewhere, wherever so disposed, as granted by the law of concession, and Mr. Wheeler's perfectly in his right to go to Escondada as before, if ever he thought seriously of the said extension, and not of any opposition in that respect.

That incident having nothing to do with the London Stock Exchange, and the cool manner in which the Argentine Central Prospectus has been received, I had no reason to allude to it in my previous letter, which only refers to the railway articles of three feet.

'Veritas' follows, saying that Mr. Robertson and myself are doubtless quite satisfied that the Rosario and Cordoba railway can be made at the cost of £4,500 per mile, although the cost of Glasgow could be made under £20,000. (no such charge is granted by the law of concession), the figure would be further reduced to £20,000 per mile.

The difference then is no more £35,000, as 'Veritas' notes, but £10,000 per mile, in the comparative view he takes of both lines. And even this difference would be still further reduced, when we take into consideration the cost of length of both lines, the cost of numerous and expensive stations on the Great Southern line; the difference in weight of rails to be used by them; and the general quality of all works, the one line being bound by law to be first-class, and the other left free to the option of the contractor.

Without being accused of partiality in the discussion of the relative value of the two contracts, I may be allowed to infer (setting aside the additional benefit of the lands) that the Cordoba contract offers to the contractors equal if not greater advantages than the Great Southern.

On the point, as to the motive which induced the legislators to make the grant of the Lands of the Cordoba Line, and with reference to its cost, I can fully satisfy 'Veritas' according to Mr. Wheeler's own estimate, by referring him, as I do, to the official documents presented by the National Government to Congress last year, previous to the last Law of Concession, being sanctioned in which the opinions of Mr. Wheeler are quoted and speak for themselves.

In the Historical memorandum dated 12th February 1863, duly passed to Congress, it is officially said: 'Mr. Wheeler has declared (in a written memorandum addressed to the Minister) that the grant of lands was an indispensable condition. That purpose, he is to be of great importance. 3rd. Because the company considers as an indispensable complement of the line the thick and organized population on both sides of it, as a means to increase the traffic, and the public welfare, augmenting the produce to be transported and multiplying in proportion all the industrial and mercantile movement, so as to raise the net returns of the line, to the point which is necessary to give the National Government of the payment of the 7 per cent, stipulated guarantee, and offer to capital a rate of interest high enough to serve as a powerful stimulus to its use.'

Enough of quotations. I keep others aside, and the rest, if a 'coup de grace' were wanting.

To analyze further the long random and unconnected observations of National and Provincial Governments, their lands and their consolidated debt, would be to fall into 'the dull routine of the profusion talk.' He refers to the first part of his letter. But respecting his comparative views of the London boards of directors of the Argentine Central and the Great Southern, in proportion all the industrial and mercantile movement, so as to raise the net returns of the line, to the point which is necessary to give the National Government of the payment of the 7 per cent, stipulated guarantee, and offer to capital a rate of interest high enough to serve as a powerful stimulus to its use.'

Catamarca, as the following letter shows. We call the attention of miners to this important discovery.— 'To the Editor of the 'Zonda.' 'I send you the following extract from a letter from Copiapó, dated 20th March, 1864.

'My friend, Don Ignacio Moreno, a Copiapó miner, who is at present in Piambala, Catamarca, writes me that he has made a grand discovery. He tells me that he has found out 21 veins, and that the metal is good, although it contains much copper—that it exceeds the ley of 100 marks of silver, with about 25 per cent of copper. He tells me that he is coming with the metal this month.'

I ought to state, Mr. Editor, that the current ley of copper received at Copiapó is 21 per cent, and that the above-mentioned metal will be purchased for its ley of silver, besides the ley of copper, without any duty, &c. &c. D. D. O.'

New Customs Tariff. In view of the necessity of conforming to the law ordering the appointment of a mixed commission for the arrangement of the new tariff of custom-house duties, for 1864, let the following commissioners be appointed for that purpose.

For articles of English manufactures, Sr. Wm. Gruba. For articles of French manufactures, M. Jubal B. Vignat. For articles of English manufactures, Sr. Wm. Gruba. For articles of French manufactures, M. Jubal B. Vignat. For articles of English manufactures, Sr. Wm. Gruba. For articles of French manufactures, M. Jubal B. Vignat.

Home produce—Don Mauricio Peanano. And it being also necessary to revise the tariff of custom house store and portage, let the following be appointed for that purpose—Don Luis Amado, Don Jacinto Mallon, and Don Eduardo Horniman.

Let these aforesaid gentlemen associate themselves with the head accountant of the custom-house, and proceed in the business appointed. Communicate to these named, expressing a hope that they will not decline their appointments, and that they will with promptness proceed to present themselves to the President of the Commission, Don Julio B. Vignat, in order to commence operations at once.
