NINTH OF JULY.

Today is the 48th anniversary of the declaration of Argentine Independence by the Senators of La Plata, in the cañedo of San Miguel de Tucuman. A few years ago the celebration was only a matter of form, there being little reason for rejoicing. But now that the country has entered on an era of peace and progress, we all join heartily in the national thanksgiving, and entertain solid hopes for the welfare of the republic.

There is no country in the world where and end as effectually thrown in the public eyes as in Buenos Ayres: to look at the newspapers one would suppose that not even a dollar's worth of paper cigars is purchased that is not duly published. Here we have on Thursday evening the whole journal cash and even petty cash accounts of the Western Railway printed in the 'Nacional,' and yet we defy any man to make out the real state of the company, to arrive at any more important fact than that the total cash on hand does not amount to a thousand silver dollars. Only a few days ago we read in the 'Nacion Argentina' a long list of public salaries to be paid, just as if people cared to occupy themselves with such insipid details. If the native newspapers are so large that they cannot fill up the front page without resorting to such unredorable matter, then why not make them smaller; the native papers are altogether too large for the reading population of Buenos Ayres.

or he subjects, and their proud indifference respecting just grievances, gained for them a most unenviable reputation, and actually made the name of British Minister or British Admiral a by-word of derision almost as well. Happily however, the gentleman in question is of a different school from his antecedents, and it is our pleasing duty to call public attention to the strenuous exertions of Mr. Thornton, not only on behalf of his fellow-countrymen here and in the Banda Oriental, but also his noble efforts to terminate a revolution which was desolating the adjoining Republic, and which he clearly perceived would, if allowed to continue, cause the most serious political complications in the River Plate.

When a man who occupies such a high position as that of British Minister in these parts, and endures the toil and hardship of a long and tedious journey, through a wild and desolate country, animated purely by a holy desire to terminate civil strife and restore peace amongst brothers. When the eye spirit of red-tapism has been courageously abolished in our nation, and the doors are thrown open to the humblest British resident amongst us, we feel indeed that at last we have got the right man in the right place, and that the former imaginary protection of a British Minister is now a reality.

Discreet, yet not timid; dignified, yet affable, Mr. Thornton unites all the characters essential in the representative of a great and powerful nation. His interference in the present Oriental question is a master-stroke of diplomacy. He saw the Flores' rebellion arising in, without any object being gained on either side, save the destruction of foreign property. He beheld the Oriental Government wasting its revenues, and pledging its properties, to subsidize a foe impossible to counter. He witnessed the undisguised alarm of the Argentine Government at the threats of Brazil. All things were favorable; he demanded an adjustment, it was readily granted, and it is rather a consoling reflection, that however impotent English influence may have been formerly in these countries, it is now in the hands of the agency of our Minister, supreme.

Mr. Thornton's diplomatic career in the River Plate has justly endeared him not only to his own countrymen but to Argentina and Uruguay. His intervention in the Oriental question has given him new claims upon Orientals. In bearing testimony thus to the real merits of our British Minister, we comply with a most pleasing duty, and we congratulate Lord John Russell on having sent us a gentleman so every way qualified to represent his Government and guard British interests.

THE CHILIAN PROPHET AND THE FRENCH DELEGATE

Cor Bilbao and M. Lelong have come to logger-heads about the extravaganzas of the Colon meeting, and the latter in his 22nd Letter on Emigration, calls the former to account for desiring to close the ports of the republic to France and Spain. Although there is little about emigration in the said letter, there is a fund of practical good sense. M. Lelong confines himself to the terra-firma of facts, reminding his enthusiastic young friend that it is Buenos Ayres, not Paris, which would suffer by the issue proceeding; and that France has always maintained a magnanimous policy abroad, whether in Montevideo, Syria or Mexico: he shows the infatuation of republicans in supposing their form of Government to be the perfection of liberty, quoting the words of M. Girardin: "Forty years of experience should have taught us to prefer real Liberty to any special form of Government, and that we must value Governments not by the name they bear, but according to the liberty they give." Name was anything true; for men are too often misled by names; and it is absurd to compare the liberty enjoyed in a S. American republic, with that of England. Shakespeare says "a rose by any other name will smell as sweet," and if security for life and property are a boon, it matters little whether the Government be republican or imperial, we must prefer the rule of order. So fallacious are names, that Great Britain the happiest country in the world, with her Constitution, and the laws she most treasured with the same, "Non omnia vincunt" or in plain English "that's one man's meat is another man's poison," and may therefore be good in one country, a monarchy in another, but history has unfortunately branded republics as generally Utopian or political quackery.

Mr. Thornton's diplomatic career in the River Plate has justly endeared him not only to his own countrymen but to Argentina and Uruguay. His intervention in the Oriental question has given him new claims upon Orientals. In bearing testimony thus to the real merits of our British Minister, we comply with a most pleasing duty, and we congratulate Lord John Russell on having sent us a gentleman so every way qualified to represent his Government and guard British interests.

keeps hovering about in space, making the combat look very like the caricature of Mr. Wells in his balloon fighting the Indians with an aerial Armstrong battery. But the assumed superiority of Sor Bilbao's arguments is only the effect of gross inflation, sentiments which cleave the sky with their lofty sound, but have no more foundation than the balloon, and are wafted about without rudder or compass; for Sor Bilbao skipped logic when he began to study philosophy, and in this manner his system of theories without syllogisms is like "the play of Hamlet with the part of Hamlet left out," or the French phrase which he so much commends "a system of tyranny without a tyrant." Sor Bilbao has undertaken to prove nothing and (positively speaking) he has proved still less.

In justification of his measure to close our ports against France, he spins out a long yarn about the decay of intellect in Frenchmen. Novelties are charming, and the most daring assertions are easier to propagate than to prove; but it is something very startling to hear our Chilian friend declare, as castro, that 40 millions of the most polite and progressive nation on earth are tending steadily to imbecility, that we are now prepared for his flights of M. Bilbao's genius, even should any of them be descended from the Gods, or subject to metempsychosis. We cannot, however, promise to pay much attention to his dogmas, or decide whether he be really a great philosopher or a charlatan. People who are anxious to make themselves a name in the newspapers must say or do something extraordinary; Diogenes would have died unknown had he not lived in a tub.

DIPLOMATIC TABLE.

There is no country in the world where and end as effectually thrown in the public eyes as in Buenos Ayres: to look at the newspapers one would suppose that not even a dollar's worth of paper cigars is purchased that is not duly published. Here we have on Thursday evening the whole journal cash and even petty cash accounts of the Western Railway printed in the 'Nacional,' and yet we defy any man to make out the real state of the company, to arrive at any more important fact than that the total cash on hand does not amount to a thousand silver dollars. Only a few days ago we read in the 'Nacion Argentina' a long list of public salaries to be paid, just as if people cared to occupy themselves with such insipid details. If the native newspapers are so large that they cannot fill up the front page without resorting to such unredorable matter, then why not make them smaller; the native papers are altogether too large for the reading population of Buenos Ayres.

Yesterday morning town was rife with all sorts of rumors respecting the Oriental question, some believed that peace was made, and that President Aguirre and Flores would be walking arm and arm through Montevideo smoking the very best Havannas, whilst others asserted that it was all up with the peace makers, as Lucas Moreno had received positive orders to cut up Flores without one moment's delay. Meanwhile the Triton howl in sight, with Mr. Thornton on board, we immediately dispatched our reporter to the top of the male to see what the news, but as yet our Tipperary stenographer has not returned. The new President of the Bank is Mr. James Llavallol. We should like to know how many shares of the Argentine Central Railway Company this Argentine capitalist has taken. It surely cannot be possible that the President of the great Buenos Ayres Bank would allow his name to figure in the papers for less than 200 shares. We hope Mr. Gaveaga will inform us at once how many shares Mr. L. has subscribed for.

The "Caja de Credito" it seems after all is a sort of pawn office. Money is advanced on everything from an umbrella to a cargo of sugar. If well managed it must pay well. Our readers cannot forget how the Police plucked upon Mr. King, whose office was "facing the pyramid," merely because he advanced on pledges, and yet now a grand company is being established for precisely the same business for which Mr. King was so heavily fined.

The news from the Interior by the last mail is not so very important. From San Luis, we hear that the Cacique of the Ranqueles has been to the capital, and made a formal peace with the Government. How long it will last is another question. In Baradava suited to the locality and most well adapted to result in a maximum of the political world, but touching the mines we hear nothing. Don Domingo Oro has been made Prime Minister. We expect that when the news of the meeting in the other day in the Boles, by the shareholders of the San Juan Mining Company reaches San Juan, there will be an explosion. The long-tailed remittance man from San Juan have not yet arrived, although, if we are to believe report there is a deal of silver in San Juan.

The news from Corrientes is of a penebolic character, yet we read in the "Reforma Pacifica" of Montevideo, that our colleague has received information of a formal revolution. We are rather inclined to think that such cannot be the case, as only last Saturday Captain Hunter, of the Esmeralda, was in our office, and stated that everything was going on well there; besides, the manager of the Maua Bank in Corrientes arrived here last Saturday, and left again for Corrientes on Sunday morning; he also knew nothing of any kind of revolution. Our Montevideo colleague must be misinformed!

In Rosario, the election of a Deputy for the absorbing topic every one is canvassing. Mr. Puyredon having resigned. On the 3d of July the sympathetic meeting took place. Messrs. Carrasco, Salva, Nicolirich, and Puyredon read beautiful speeches. The meeting was a dead failure, and one gentleman made a bitter speech, pitching into the Argentines of his neighbourhood for their great want of public spirit. The better of all strangers, who are buying up land wherever they can get it. The Rosario scribbles never were so busy before, they are rather a rapid fortune. No news of any description from Peru. The snows on the Cordillera are reported to be terrific. People are extremely anxious to hear about Callao, but we have not yet got any word of volunteers to clear away the snow and ice from the 'Upsallata,' there is no probability of our hearing from the Pacific for some months. In Mendoza, we regret to say that the small pox is making the most frightful ravages; the mortality is not so great, but the marks are terrible. In Tucuman, Governor Paez keeps yielding most remarkably quiet, and tobacco planting is in progress. From Rioja and Salta we have no mails, but it is said that the revolution is all over, and everything goes on as usual.

People who still preserve an interest in cotton planting will learn with pleasure that a planter from the State of Georgia, in the United States, is about to proceed to Mendoza, to establish a regular cotton plantation, on the American system. As the gentleman in question thoroughly understands his business, and has had twenty years experience as a cotton planter in the States, he will be able to look forward to the happiest results. The Olden beef question threatens to become the topic of the day. Mr. Birken has sent some samples which Mr. Olden most solemnly asserts. It is a rather happy circumstance that the River Plate divides them, or we should not answer for the consequences. Several friends have been of opinion that Olden's system is decidedly the best. Never having tasted either the Olden or Birken beef, we can offer no opinion on the matter, but we call attention to the circles of Messrs. Gordon & Co., on this tough question, which we publish in another column.

The Tribuna states that the Palermo houses are the property of the carpenters and being fitted up for a school of arts. We have reason to suppose that our colleague is mistaken, as some of the carpenters of the Municipality of Belgrano have not been complied with, and the Government of Buenos Ayres, we understand, has been about to be established there, and to prove the plan. We certainly think that Palermo is better suited for a pleasure garden or park than a rather questionable enterprise in the shape of a school of arts.

Our colleague, the 'Nacion Argentina,' will soon move into the new quarters, next door to the Club. It is rumored that on the inauguration of the new printing office there will be what is called a house warming. There will be a grand Te Deum in the Cathedral this morning, at the President, Governor, and Ministers will attend, at the conclusion of which there will be a religious procession round the Plaza.

BREEDING SHEEP.

In my last letter I promised to return to the subject of breeding, selection and the adaptation of breeds to stock to this country. With this promise I now comply.

The principle of selection well directed, will have approached the success in breeding stock. Now, the selection of stock or the variety of stock best suited to the locality, the selection of the individual members of the stock from which to form the breeding herd or flock, so as to insure uniform qualities.

The selection of stock from among the animals in stock of those best calculated to maintain and improve in their progeny the type of animal chosen as that best suited to the locality and most well adapted to result in a maximum of profit. The selection of males of higher blood and those of Saxon among those of crossing with the existing breed, so as to raise its standard and bring out in greater force the qualities desired, are all equally important points requiring the best attention of the breeder.

It is requisite that the breeder should clearly define his object and perseveringly strive to attain it, never deviating from those principles which breeders and physiologists have demonstrated to be those essential to success and conformable to the natural law.

Let the breeder determine if he breeds cattle, whether he seeks milk, beef or hide, then 'select' accordingly, and endeavour to attain as near as possible perfection in his 'specialty,' with the least prejudice to the other qualities; and if sheep, whether his locality offers greater facilities for profitable production of sheep or wool, and if the latter, the quality that will return him the best interest for his capital.

As sheep breeding constitutes the chief occupation of our countrymen in the country, I will proceed in the first instance to treat of this branch. On land of good quality producing rich herbage, it has been demonstrated that larger quantities of good sound blood are the most profitable, especially care being taken that the land is not overstocked, that there be ample room for the extension of the flocks without risk of its being exposed to any deficiency of food. On such land this description of sheep will fully maintain its high standard, due attention being paid to his flock and their individual staple in its class, and improvement can with certainty be attained in any direction sought by a judicious choice of rams of vigor, size and quality.

On poor lands smaller sheep will be more advantageous, and the danger of overstocking is much greater than on the better camps.

On such lands a stock of large vigorous animals would inevitably degenerate, whereas a smaller animal having smaller requirement of food can obtain on less space of ground than the larger sheep could obtain its requisite quantum. These smaller sheep will not however be exempt from a tendency to degenerate or deteriorate in all its qualities, and considerably so, but whereas the deterioration of the larger and higher bred sheep is inevitable on such lands, the smaller and less highly bred sheep can be kept up to their standard and considerably improved by the introduction of vigorous rams of a class a few degrees superior and of larger frame than the existing stock.

The class of sheep having been determined on as suitable to the locality, the breeder should proceed to select the individuals. Uniformity of size, weight of fleece, quality of wool, and conformation of the ewe should be carefully sought, for if this uniformity is not fairly attained very unequal and more or less unsatisfactory results will be the consequence. Moreover it is important to preserve this uniformity of inferior property, whether as to size or conformation of the ewe should be carefully sought, for if this uniformity is not fairly attained very unequal and more or less unsatisfactory results will be the consequence. Moreover it is important to preserve this uniformity of inferior property, whether as to size or conformation of the ewe should be carefully sought, for if this uniformity is not fairly attained very unequal and more or less unsatisfactory results will be the consequence.

"Like begets like," is an established fact, though it is in the last degree important to preserve the purity of the superior quality, and to guard against the introduction of inferior blood in the rams they sell, whether first, second, third, fourth, or still more advanced crosses of the superior imported breeds, and who separate the ram lambs at a proper age (four months) from the ewe, and feed them apart on the best of fodder, so as to ensure their fullest development from their infancy upwards, as being thoroughly "vigorous" and capable of imparting, with all its attendant benefits, the qualities of the superior variety, and constituting to its progeny. Further, it is essential that the rams should have attained a sufficient age, more or less, two years, before they are put with the ewes, and that they should be in first rate condition, for "like begets like," whether it be vigor or feebleness, heavy and sound, or light and unsound fleece.

I now approach the difficult part of my subject, viz, the crosses most likely to prove advantageous and lead to the ends proposed by the breeder. I have already approached the subject with much greater diffidence had I not for a considerable period studied it and taken into consideration the condition, the general state of the flocks, their yield of wool, its quality, texture, and value.

The graft on the indigenous or native sheep was the Merino, which for more than a quarter of a century has been refining the breeds of the country, until in numerous instances the fineness of wool has become more or less equal to the Spanish Merino wools, with which it was longed that it might compete. There are, however, many causes operating to its disadvantage and shutting the wools of this country out of anything like a close competition with the mother country (Spanish) wools and those of Saxony among which I may name as the chief the unequal maintenance of the sheep and the "carattilla" burr, etc., etc. The extreme fineness of the wools of Buenos Ayres have attained, and the usualness of the sheep frequently met with, cause it to be prejudicial in an excessive degree by the prickly armed seeds and impurities. These prices, therefore, which can be obtained for our wools have an insufficient relation to the weight yielded, so that a crying necessity has arisen for augmenting the weight of the fleece, "lengthening and strengthening the staple" of the wools, so that, while yielding greater abundance, they may the better bear the operation of cleansing from impurities.

There is a cause operating to produce the extreme fineness, and tenderness, which is found in our wools—a cause which is tending sadly to the disadvantage of wool growers—and that is, the overstocking of the lands, already pointed out as the fruitful source of loss in many ways, and I must repeat, before proceeding with some suggestions, that as long as this grave fault is practised, there will be much labor in vain, in the attempts at improvement.

There are two causes which operate to make a judicious choice and follow a correct system. A breeder must thoroughly understand the condition of his flock and their individual requirements, and he must also know what positive results will accrue, to make this judicious choice. One and the other will doubtless improve his flock, but which will give him the results most desirable under his special circumstances? The Negrette is finer wool. The Rambouillet is larger carcass, the heavier fleece and the longer and stronger staple. These qualities are just those the breeder has especially to look to, to amend the prevailing defects of the wools of this country.

When the sheep are small, fleece light, fine and false in staple, there can be no doubt that the vigor imparted in all these points by a cross with the Rambouillet is the thing required. If your sheep are of medium quality, the Rambouillet will fine the wool lengthen the staple, and give size to the wool and weight to fleece. And the smaller Rambouillet ram is just the animal which, from its size, is calculated to produce and maintain an improved standard in such a flock, commencing, say with second or third cross and following with third or fourth cross, and so on.

If your flock a vigorous one, well grown, with good weight of fleece, sound but not particularly fine? With such a flock you cannot fail to do well by using the Negrette cross, for you could you fail to do well with the Rambouillet, especially if you purchase some of third, fourth, or fifth cross, as, through these you may attain, in a high degree, all the good qualities, extreme prices excepted. It becomes, in this case, a more matter of nice judgment which of the crosses are most desirable under the special circumstances of the individual flock, for it must always be borne in mind that to strive after extreme fineness is a somewhat hazardous course.

There is another way of working with these breeds, thus: First raise the standard of the animal, give weight and length of staple through a couple of crosses of the Rambouillet, and then on this invigorated breed, graft the extra fineness of the Negrette. Again, if you have a Negrette fawn flock, deficient in length of staple, the remedy is to be found in a cross with the Rambouillet.

FARMER.

Mr. Wells' Overland Route.

Dr. Manuel Tristany publishes in the 'Tribuna' some remarks about proposed balloon excursion across the continent, which he deems not only feasible but comparatively easy, an idea not shared by the public.

1st. He says the aerostat must steer N.W. to avoid the deserts of Patagonia, and cross the Cordillera at its narrowest part.

2nd. The distance from Buenos Ayres, passing in a right line over San Juan, is 421 leagues (1368 miles).

3rd. The atmosphere, ranging between 28 and 40 degrees latitude will be temperate, and as the greatest elevation in crossing the Andes was not exceed 4500 or 6000 yards, this is a trifle, for Messrs. Glaisher and Coxwell ascended at Greenwhich, in 1825, to a height of 10,000 yards. There is therefore no fear of Mr. Wells being asphyxiated.

4th. The most dangerous part of the journey—from the pyramid of San Martin in Mendoza to Mapocho in Chile—cannot exceed 40 leagues in length.

5th. The great risks are of falling among the Indians, or in the ravines of the Andes. The first he may avoid by starting for Cordoba and Mendoza, the second is even less danger than that of falling in the sea, since Mr. Wells takes small exploring balloons which

The Montevideo news three or four days ago from the Bolsa this afternoon.

A large business has been done in National securities. We give the following transactions:

Mr. Rom, the popular manager of the Bolsa, has in order to accommodate the merchants, opened a box for Montevideo letters at his office.

Mr. William Letiche, the able manager of the Maua Bank, is temporarily absent.

Mr. Camille Reusens has been requested to publish the following in justification of the above named gentleman.

Having read in your estimable paper, of the 20th, a notice signed by Mr. Aguirre and in liquidation, to the effect that Mr. Camille Reusens had been dismissed from our house, I beg to say, in conjunction with the Brazilian forces.

There are various versions of the rupture, but it seems President Aguirre refused to change the Cabinet.

in the Julio verbal of this date; but insurmountable difficulties having arisen between him and Mr. Yager, I have resolved to annul his appointment.

British Minister.—Our article respecting Mr. Thornton was written, before we had the unlucky news of a rupture of negotiations.

ON CHANGE, July 8th, 1864.

Paper price of ounces, 467 1/2. Paper price of sovereigns, 113.

There was a great stir on the Bolsa to-day, and some brokers were caught in the net.
